What do I need to know before the week starts: 1/23-1/27

Final full week of first semester

As we did right before winter break, we will ask students to assess their progress during Wolfpack. Please ask your student what their goals were in these final days of the semester. You will find a few classes that offer final papers, projects and even assessments intended to give our students another opportunity to inform teachers before they decide on the appropriate grade that reflects student learning.

Off and Away

Our MTSS team have been reviewing student behavior challenges throughout this first term looking for problems that arise frequently. They gave suggestions and feedback to help lead our team. While we work weekly with individuals and small groups on a spectrum of challenges that arise for students in the middle years, cellphones remain a frequent element in conflicts.

Our off and away policy shift this year means the following in the middle school. When students enter the building, they are expected to have their device off and in their backpacks. Students may choose to use their phones during their 30-minute lunch break. The only other times students can use a cellphone in school are when a teacher offers students the option to use a phone for a specific purpose and time frame OR if the office and home have prearranged a method to make contact with home through a cell phone, which occurs in the office area.
